INTERESTING FACTS

Dashi is one of the most important ingredients in Japanese cuisine. Dashi is a clear broth from Japan that is considered the basis for the umami flavour (nowadays also called the fifth flavour). With the broth, it is possible to further enhance and bring out the intensity and inherent flavour of the ingredients that are cooked in it.

When people in Pinzgau rave about the "g'schmackigen" Scottish, they are usually not talking about a naturalized resident of the United Kingdom! Rather, one speaks then of a cheese specialty that has almost fallen into oblivion and is so not at all stingy in taste. Pinzgauer Schotten used to be a typical dish of the poor rural population. For the production, the whey and buttermilk that fell off during cheese and butter production was utilized.

GOLDEN GATE AND TREE-TIP PATH

At the end of the valley in Saalbach Hinterglemm is the highest summit hiking trail in Europe. In combination with the "Golden Gate Bridge of the Alps", this excursion destination is a unique project worldwide. The nature-oriented circular trail starts at the car park at the end of the valley and leads over two kilometres through alpine pastures, meadows and forests. The one-kilometre-long Baumzipfelweg with the 200-metre-long "Golden Gate Bridge of the Alps" starts at the Lindlingalm. The bridge is up to 42 m high and spans the valley head at the source of the Saalach.

The 600-metre-long "Wipfelweg" is the focal point of the Baumzipfelweg. A massive larch wood construction - up to 30 m above the forest floor - with stairs, towers, platforms and bridges. The Glemmtaler Baumzipfelweg offers a great excursion destination for nature lovers and families!
